Introduction

This document contains definitions, features and information about USB Pruva API services.

General Data Structure and Error Answers

The general response structure returned from the services is as follows.

Response Body	<pre>{ "success": true, "message": null, "data": { } }</pre>
---------------	--

Successful service calls will be returned with HTTP Code 200.

In case of authorization and session errors, 401 and 403 HTTP Codes are returned. If there is a schema problem in the sent Request content, a return is made with HTTP Code 422. In case of a server-side error, a return is made with HTTP Code 500.

If you make your service call with an unsupported HTTP method type, a 405 HTTP Code will be returned.

Verification and Security

It is the service that returns the token you need to use in services where authorization is required. You must send the token obtained from this service with the "token" key in the request header in services where authorization is required.
